My family and I have purchased satellite radio for my grandmother. She enjoys this immensely as she can not get the variety of programming anywhere else. These services are paid for and content should not be influenced by the FCC at the behest of the NAB.

Media conglomerates have already gotten too big and now they're using their influence to further create a more non-competitive market. Please let the rapidly growing satellite radio market speak for the wishes of the citizens desiring other choices in programming.

I can watch my local news provided by my cable television provider, why should satellite radio be prohibited from offering a similar service. If satellite radio companies are making the investment to provide a local service, it is not anyone's right to interfere.
